Supplementary Millinery Opening

Tuesday, April 12, 1907.

No former display of Millinery can compare with this massing of Beautiful Headwear. The most delightfully satisfactory assembling of everything which is to be worn by careful dressers during this season.

And the season? It holds delightful surprises—you may gratify your individual taste with little fear of not being "correct"—for, while the styles of the Empire period have been adopted—and adapted, in the most mystic cutting, and knotting and twisting, and draping, in the placing of plume and flower, of buckle and bow, there is shown a diversity of execution which, more than at any previous period, rules the world of Millinery.

There are hats here which are superb in their simplicity, the air of style which distinguishes them depending upon the artistic contour of the brim, the relation of decoration to outline.

Others there are in which elaboration is almost extreme. Beauty and "becomingness" mark each hat we show.

Please Consider This a Personal Invitation to Attend the Opening

Neurology.

The Evils of Eye Strain Conquered.

By DRS. RUDD & BUCHANAN, Neurologists.

Nervous energy or vitality operates the human machine, just as steam or electricity operates the mechanical machine. Any excessive demand upon this vital energy, or disturbance of its regular flow, is certain to show as a functional derangement of some of the organs. We point to the fact that the human eye consumes ten per cent. of all the power generated in the brain—that is, the eyes are entitled to that much by Nature's assignment; but when they are defective they will involuntarily get the upperhand of the rest of the nervous system, and use up more nerve energy than they are entitled to, sometimes as much as seventy-five per cent. of all that is generated, in their effort to overcome their defects and maintain vision. This constitutes eye-strain. With these facts in view, it is easy to see that if the eyes consume an amount of the body's supply of nerve force in excess of their natural share, some other organ must suffer, because the eyes have thus become a leak on the system, and have so exhausted the supply of vitality that no organ can perform its function perfectly, purely from lack of the necessary power to operate it. Then medical doctors will find symptoms of deranged functions and treat the symptoms. We proceed to find the cause and remove it, and the symptoms will disappear of themselves. There is nothing mysterious about this. No theory is worthy of confidence until it has been practically demonstrated. More than ten thousand successful cases, hundreds of which had tried other methods as practiced by the most eminent old-school specialists, is about the best demonstration of the superior merits of Neurology that could be given.
